

case of young talent.

THE Oxley College Parents' and Friends' Association has made a generous donation to the BDCU Children's Foundation.

Meanwhile, Geo Jansz cooked up a storm with an army of parent volunteers who ran food and drink stalls. The casual, affordable and upbeat event made the Highlands community feel like dancing.

The money was raised through the college's inaugural Eve on the Green event last November. The open-air concert fundraiser which featured music, food and wine, sold over 1400 tickets.

The event raised the money for the BDCU Children's Foundation, a charity that supports young people in need.

John Waters and Leo Sayer led a host of performers from Oxley, Chevalier College and the Southern Highlands Christian Schools in a show-